There was brilliant flash of lightning lower Duke street last night. about ten o'clock last night, followed by a crash of thunder, which startled many and caused the belief that something had been struck. The surmises were correct, as the electric fluid had entered the rear portion of a small frame house occupied by a colored man named George Derrick on Princess street, between Royal and Pitt, tore the skin and clothing from his left side and knocked George Derrick on Princess street, between Royal and Pitt, tore the skin and clothing from his left side and knocked his wife down. Derrick was at the foot of a stairway at the time and was in the act of drinking water preparatory to retiring when the bolt entered the house. As stated above, his wife was prostrated by the bolt, but she soon revived. Neighbors entered the house and medical aid was summoned, but an examination showed that apart from being severely burned Derrick had not been seriously injured.
